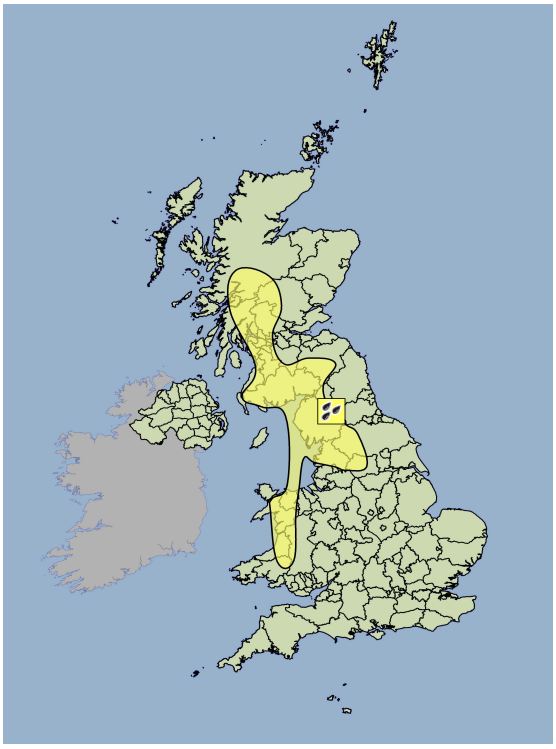
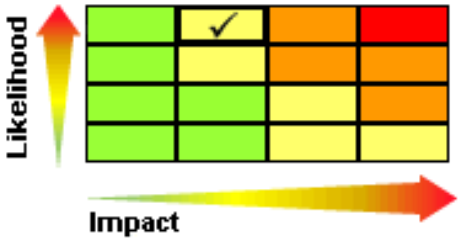
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Another period of strong, moist southwesterly winds is likely to bring heavy rain to some areas, particularly high ground in western Britain. Rainfall totals of 20 to 40 mm are likely quite widely - this falling during a relatively short period of Tuesday morning across Scotland and bringing a risk of surface water flooding.

Similar amounts of rain are likely across Wales and northwest England where locally 60-80 mm is possible over prone hilly areas, so some localised flooding is likely across sensitive areas.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 00:15 on Tue, 22nd Dec 2015 until 18:00 on Tue, 22nd Dec 2015

Further spells of heavy rain are likely to affect parts of Wales, northwest England, as well as southern and western Scotland during Tuesday. The rain will spread from the southwest early on Tuesday, clearing most of Scotland by late morning but persisting across England and Wales well into the afternoon.

Please be aware of the possibility of localised flooding of roads and properties, with the situation remaining sensitive in some areas affected by recent flooding.

This warning has been extended to cover parts of Scotland, whilst the position in the risk matrix has been moved to represent a higher likelihood of low impacts.
